The tourism social media checklist.

The 40 checks I run before I touch any account. Work through them with your own feeds open and you'll know exactly where you're losing followers, enquiries and bookings.

Housekeeping

Pratim Narayan Moitra

I run social media and email for tourism brands, and every month I show you what it brought in. I've worked with PATA, ATTA, GBTA and the World Food Travel Association.

Thirty minutes, honest answers.

This is the same list I use when a tourism brand asks me to look at their accounts. It won't tell you what to post tomorrow. It tells you which part of your marketing is leaking, so you fix the right thing first.

FIRST

Open everything

Instagram, Facebook, LinkedIn, your email tool and Google Analytics, each in its own tab. Have last month's numbers nearby if you keep them.

THEN

Tick honestly

A check only counts if it's true today. Planned, nearly or sometimes all score zero. One point for every box you tick.

LAST

Add it up

Score each area out of 5 below, then the total out of 40. Your lowest area is where to start, and page 7 shows what to do next.

◆ Every check applies to associations, DMCs and hotels. Where the detail is different for each, the note under the check says how.

AREA A

Foundations.

Your profiles sell for you on the days you don't post.

_____ / 5

- ☐ Your name field says what you do, not only who you are.
Instagram searches the name field. "Summit Treks, Nepal trekking" gets found by people searching for Nepal trekking. "Summit Treks" alone doesn't.
- ☐ Your bio answers three things in three short lines.
Who it's for, why you, and what to do next. End on the action, whether that's book, register, join or message.
- ☐ Your link in bio goes to a page made for people arriving from social.
Not your home page. A short page with this month's trip, event or offer at the top, then the three things people ask for most.
- ☐ Highlights or featured posts answer the questions people DM you most.
Trips or rooms, dates, reviews and how to book. For associations, membership and the next event.
- ☐ Your handle, photo and description match on every platform.
People check you on two or three channels before they trust you. Matching profiles look established, and mismatched ones look abandoned.

AREA B

Consistency.

A rhythm your audience can count on, in season and out.

_____ / 5

- ☐ One named person owns social media, with hours set aside every week.
When it's everyone's job, it ends up as the intern's job at 10pm. Name the owner, even if other people help.
- ☐ You post at least three times a week, every week.
Quiet weeks cost reach you have to buy back later. Three good posts beat seven rushed ones.
- ☐ There's a calendar planned at least two weeks ahead.
Built around your season, your event dates and the travel moments in the markets you sell to.
- ☐ In the last 90 days, your feed never went quiet for more than 10 days.
Scroll back and check. The usual gaps are the weeks right before and right after a big event.
- ☐ You have a folder of approved photos and video ready to use.
Ask guides, members, guests and partners for content every month. Then a busy week never means an empty week.

AREA C

Content.

Posts people stop for, save and act on.

____ / 5

☐ At least one post in three is a Reel or short video.

Short video is still how most accounts reach people who don't follow them yet. Photos keep your followers, video finds new ones.

☐ Your carousels teach or plan something.

Itineraries, packing lists, the three things nobody tells you. Useful posts get saved and sent to friends, and that's what travels.

☐ Every post has one job, and one call to action that matches it.

Reach, save, share or enquire. A post that tries to do all four usually does none of them.

☐ The first line of every caption is a hook, not your company name.

Most people read one line. Make it the reason to read the second.

☐ Real people show up in your feed, not only landscapes.

Guides, hosts, members, speakers and guests. People trust people, and faces earn more comments than views do.

AREA D

Community.

Replies, partners and the people who already like you.

____ / 5

☐ Comments and DMs get a reply within one working day.

A DM asking about dates is a warm lead. Treat it exactly like an email enquiry.

☐ Saved replies are ready for the questions you get every week.

Rates, dates, how to book, how to join. Fast answers that still sound like you.

☐ You spend 15 minutes a day engaging with the accounts around you.

Members, partners, destinations and travel media. Leave comments worth reading, not emojis.

☐ You reshare content from guests, members and partners, with credit.

It's proof from someone who isn't you, and it gives them a reason to share you back.

☐ You run collab posts with partners, sponsors or speakers.

One post, two audiences. For associations, every speaker and sponsor is a collab post waiting to happen.

AREA E

Conversion.

Attention turned into enquiries, registrations and bookings.

____ / 5

- ☐ Every post that sells something links to a page for that exact thing.
The trip, the event, the room or the offer. Never a home page where people have to go looking.
- ☐ Your links carry UTM tags.
Tags tell Google Analytics which post or email sent each visitor. Without them, social never gets credit for the bookings it starts.
- ☐ There's a reason to join your email list, and it's in your bio link.
A trip planning guide, early bird access, member news. Followers can vanish with one algorithm change. Subscribers don't.
- ☐ Keyword comments or DM automation turn interest into a conversation.
Comment BASECAMP and get the packing list. Every comment becomes a lead you can follow up, and the algorithm counts it as engagement.
- ☐ The page people land on loads fast on a phone, with the button in view.
Under 3 seconds, and the enquire, book or register button visible without scrolling. Test it on your own phone today.

AREA F

Email.

Where followers become guests, delegates and members.

____ / 5

- ☐ Your newsletter went out this month.
Your list is your warmest audience. Every month of silence cools it a little more.
- ☐ New subscribers get a welcome email automatically.
It's the email people are most likely to open. Say hello, say what's coming and point to one next step.
- ☐ Your subject lines say what's inside.
"Three new autumn departures" beats "Newsletter 14" every single time.
- ☐ Your list is split by who people are.
Past guests and new leads. Members and non members. Trade and travellers. Each group needs a different email.
- ☐ Every email has one main action, and you can see who takes it.
One button, tagged with UTMs, so you know which email filled which seats.

AREA G

Proof.

Numbers your board or owner will actually read.

_____ / 5

- ☐ You know last month's reach, followers, link clicks and enquiries.
Write them down on the first working day of every month. The trend matters more than any single number.

 - ☐ You know your three best posts from last month, and why they worked.
Judge them on saves, shares and link clicks, not only likes.

 - ☐ You measure the thing you're judged on.
Associations, member signups and event registrations. DMCs, enquiries and bookings. Hotels, direct bookings against the OTAs.

 - ☐ Your board or owner gets one page every month.
Three numbers that moved, what drove them and what changes next month. Nobody reads a twenty slide dashboard.

 - ☐ What didn't work gets dropped, and what did gets more.
A report is only useful if next month's calendar changes because of it.

AREA H

Housekeeping.

The unglamorous basics that save you when things go wrong.

_____ / 5

- ☐ At least two people have admin access to every account.
If the only admin leaves, you can lose the account and years of followers with it. It happens more often than you'd think.

 - ☐ Two factor login is switched on everywhere.
Hacked tourism accounts get used for fake giveaways and booking scams under your name.

 - ☐ If you boost posts, you do it in Ads Manager with a goal and an audience.
The boost button buys reach. Ads Manager buys the people who can actually book, register or join.

 - ☐ Your Google Business Profile is complete, and every review gets a reply.
For hotels and DMCs it's often seen before your website. Recent photos, the right hours, a reply to every review.

 - ☐ Your brand basics are written down.
Colours, fonts, tone of voice and a few templates, so anyone who posts stays on brand, even on a busy day.

What your score means.

Find your total out of 40. Then look at your lowest area, because that's where one fix moves the most.

34 to 40

STRONG

You have the rhythm.

The wins now are in conversion and proof. Sharper links, better emails, and a monthly report that ties your posts to bookings, members or registrations.

24 to 33

SOLID, WITH LEAKS

The basics are there, but attention is slipping away.

People see you and like you, then leave before they enquire. Fix your lowest area first, then work through Conversion and Email.

14 to 23

REAL GAPS

You're working hard for less than you should get.

Start with Consistency and Conversion. They pay back fastest, and everything else is easier once they're in place.

START HERE

Build the rhythm before anything else.

Name an owner, plan two weeks ahead and post three times a week for a month. That alone will change how your accounts feel.

My lowest area

The three checks I'll fix first

Your first 30 days.

If you're not sure where to begin, this order works for almost every tourism account I've seen.

WEEK ONE

Fix the foundations

Name field, bio, link in bio page, highlights, a second admin and two factor login. Most of A and H in one afternoon.

WEEK TWO

Build the rhythm

Name an owner, plan the next two weeks, gather a folder of photos and video, and book three posting slots a week.

WEEK THREE

Connect social to email

Add UTM tags, give people a reason to subscribe from your bio, and switch on a welcome email.

WEEK FOUR

Measure and report

Write down your numbers, find your three best posts, and put one page in front of your board or owner.

Three posts a week, each with a job.

A simple weekly pattern for each kind of tourism brand. Keep the three slots and change what goes in them, and you'll never stare at an empty calendar again.

FOR Associations	FOR DMCs and operators	FOR Hotels
A member spotlight carousel Their story in their words, tagged so they share it with their own network. An event countdown Reel Speakers, the venue and the reason to register this week rather than next. An industry insight post A number or a trend your members will want to repost on LinkedIn.	A trip planning carousel The route, the best months and the things nobody tells you. A destination Reel One place, one moment, and a line that makes people save it for later. A guest or guide story Real faces on a real trip, with a link to that exact itinerary.	A room or experience Reel Show the stay, the breakfast and the view, not just the bed. A local guide carousel Where to eat, walk and watch the sunset within twenty minutes of you. A reason to book direct A perk that only exists when they book with you, not through an OTA.
Once a month by email. Member news and the next event, with one registration link.	Once a month by email. New departures and a story from the road, sent to past guests first.	Once a month by email. A seasonal offer to past guests, bookable direct.

What to put in front of your board

Likes don't renew memberships. Pick the numbers you're actually judged on, and report three of them every month.

Associations

New member signups, event registrations, sponsor visibility and newsletter growth.

DMCs and operators

Enquiries and bookings traced through tracked links from every post and email.

Hotels

Direct booking clicks against the OTAs, plus the bookings your email offers bring in.
